

Pacific Coast Producers 2019 CROP REPORT

June 7, 2019 | Issue No. 4

Tomatoes

Pear Shapes – The crop is looking very nice and maturing as expected.

Conventionals – Transplanting has finished. Early and mid-season planting are maturing on nicely.

Organics – The crop spared from the hail during May is looking good. Maturing and progressing as expected. The crop hit by the hail will begin harvest earlier than anticipated and will produce smaller yields.

Peaches

Growers are starting to finish thinning their later varieties. The third round of sizing took place confirming fruit is still on track with last year's measurements. Fruit quality continues to appear good with no major issues. Growers are busy irrigating and fertilizing their orchards. Organic peaches will begin harvest Monday, June 10th.

Did You Know?

Peach pits are removed during the canning process and sent to a biomass facility to be recycled by converting them into energy

Cherries

Harvest is set to begin Monday, June 10th. Salem will start machine picking and move to hand pick by the end of the week. Yakima and The Dalles will begin hand picking June 11th or 12th. The June crop outlook is down from the May estimate. This is due to the cool temperatures during the pollenization and fertilization period causing the bloom period to be too short and too cool for development.

Grapes

Growers are in the process of girdling and should be completed this week. Girdling is the removal of bark around the trunk or branch. This process increases berry weight and helps improve berry uniformity. Irrigating as needed.

Pears

Fruit continues to grow with sizes varying in all orchards from 1" to 1.9". Heavy fruit set remains in many orchards making for a promising size crop. Growers continue to irrigate as triple digits are in the forecast.

Apricots

Fruit continues to turn pale green in most orchards. Summer is well under way with triple digits in the forecast prompting farmers to continue irrigation. Most fruit have not reached minimum size requirements yet and are continuing to grow. Anticipated harvest start date is between June 18-20.

Our Growers

BUTTON AND TURKOVICH

Located in Winters, California, the Button and Turkovich ranch was established in the 1850's. They grow various organic and conventional fruits and vegetables including tomatoes, prunes, walnuts, wine grapes, oranges, seed crops and herbs. Today the ranch is run by Tony Turkovich and his son Michael. Tony's favorite part of farming is watching plants and trees grow and produce bountiful crops that are good tasting and healthy for society.
